Trends and Highlights

The Civilian Police Oversight Agency (CPOA) received 268 complaints in 2017, a 35% increase compared with 2016 but comparable to the number of complaints received in prior years. The CPOA also received 519 citizen police commendations in 2017, submitted by 187 individuals acknowledging outstanding acts of service by 283 officers and employees.

The CPOA completed 116 citizen police complaint investigations, representing 215 allegations of police misconduct in 2017. The 116 complaints represent a 65% decrease since the 331 complaints completed in 2016, which is partially a consequence of the backlog in cases the CPOA had to address that year. Among completed complaints, 68 were Administratively Closed and 48 had other findings. These complaints were submitted by 109 complainants, involved 105 APD sworn and civilian staff members, and resulted in 133 findings.

Officers with Sustained findings for violating Standard Operating Procedure were referred to the Chief of Police, who has sole disciplinary authority over APD personnel. Sustained findings are made part of the officer's permanent record. Out of 133 overall findings, the Chief of Police sustained 16 findings (11 total cases) and disciplined 14.

The CPOA and the Chief did not concur on four findings. The national average sustained findings rate in police misconduct is 8% (CATO Institute's National Police Misconduct Reporting Project, 2010). This ranks the Albuquerque Police Department's rate of sustained findings 12% above average.

The CPOA will continue to work towards compliance with the court approved settlement agreement and collaborate with the Internal Affairs Division to investigate civilian complaints fully and fairly. The CPOA will also continue working with the community to enhance accountability and transparency at the Albuquerque Police Department. We strive to improve not only the oversight process but also the relationship between the public and the police force as a whole.

Introduction

This report describes the activities of the Civilian Police Oversight Agency (CPOA), which provides civilian oversight of the Albuquerque Police Department, for calendar year 2017. “Civilian oversight” refers to persons who are not sworn police officers having input on police department policy and handling of misconduct allegations¹ This typically involves, at a minimum, citizen participation in the review of complaints about police. The CPOA is a type of external civilian investigatory agency whereby civilians employed by an independent governmental institution are authorized to accept, investigate, and make recommendations concerning the resolution of complaints against police. The external civilian investigatory agency is one of four generally recognized models of civilian oversight that vary in their independence from and capacity to influence police department policy and discipline.² Table 1 on the following page describes each of these models; the strengths and weaknesses of each.³ Although there is no accepted “best practice” for civilian oversight, practitioners argue that oversight agencies should go beyond complaint disposition by attempting to identify the broader problems that underlie community dissatisfaction with police.⁴

The process utilized by the CPOA for reviewing complaints, as well as the findings they recommend to the Chief of the Albuquerque Police Department, are described in the sections that immediately follow. This report then provides contextual information encompassing background on the Police Oversight Ordinance, evaluation by the independent monitor for the court approved Settlement Agreement; a description of the purpose of civilian oversight; the process for mediation of civilian complaints; progress made on problem-oriented oversight projects; and policy changes recommended.

Next, the report presents quantitative data on the number of complaints received and completed by the CPOA during 2017, including the number of allegations investigated or administratively closed and the CPOA’s recommended findings for these allegations. Finally, the report provides demographic and multiple or repeat allegation information for persons involved in complaints, first for civilians and then for police department officers and employees.

Table 1. Models of Civilian Oversight of Police

	Description	Strengths	Weaknesses
Internal Civilian Investigation	Civilians are hired to conduct complaint investigations for the internal affairs unit of a police department	Financial and political support for a separate oversight agency is not necessary; civilians replace sworn officers as investigators	Employees have incentives to appease department employers and are unlikely to develop uniquely "civilian" viewpoints
External Civilian Review or Appeal	An independent civilian review board reviews police investigations or civilian appeals; board can make finding or disciplinary recommendations	Can provide greater transparency of complaint handling by internal affairs and incline department to act on recommendations	Relies on data from police investigators; if composed of volunteers they may only be able to review a limited number of cases
External Civilian Investigation	Agency can accept and investigate complaints; make finding or disciplinary recommendations; advise policy; and administer alternative dispute resolution	Authority to reach independent judgment regarding merits of a complaint; identify issues in policy, supervision or training; and oversee officer-citizen mediation	Insufficient resources can rapidly undermine effectiveness; limited ability to address problems not brought to its attention via citizen complaints
External Civilian Auditor	Auditor is granted full access to police department records and given broad authority to report on all aspects of departmental policy	Augmented ability to discover patterns of problematic police behavior or policies unlikely to be addressed through traditional complaint processes	Necessary resources may be out of reach for most communities; success is highly dependent on individual skill of auditor and his or her staff

Process for Reviewing Civilian Police Complaints and Findings Categories

The process for reviewing civilian police complaints starts with a person filing a complaint against the Albuquerque Police Department (APD) via the internet or in writing. The CPOA will mediate complaints, whenever appropriate and agreed upon by the parties. If the case is not appropriate for mediation, the Civilian Police Oversight Agency (CPOA) will open a case and assign it to an investigator. The assigned investigator will interview witnesses, obtain evidence, and interview the APD personnel involved. Once the investigation of the complaint is completed, the Executive Director of the CPOA will review the complaint and results of the investigation to determine if there are any violations of Albuquerque Police Department Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs). SOPs are the Police Department's rules regulating employee conduct. The Executive Director of the CPOA will draft a letter indicating his conclusions and findings, which the POB will accept, reject, or modify. The Executive Director may send the completed investigation to the Department in order to meet discipline deadlines. The members of the Police Oversight Board (POB) will review the complaint and approve the Executive Director's findings and conclusions. After the POB has approved the Executive Director's findings, the CPOA will send the findings to the person who filed the complaint via Certified Mail and to the Albuquerque Police Department. The person who filed the complaint may appeal the POB's findings. The Civilian Police Oversight Agency can only recommend discipline. The Chief of Police retains sole authority to impose discipline to an Albuquerque Police Department employee for violations of the Albuquerque Police Department Standard Operating Procedures. The person who filed the Complaint may appeal the POB's findings and the Chief's disciplinary findings. The Civilian Police Oversight Agency does not conduct criminal investigations.

There are six possible findings that the APD and the CPOA use. These six are: Sustained, Not Sustained, Exonerated, Unfounded, Sustained Violation Not Based on Original Complaint (Sustained/NBOOC), and Administratively Closed. The following are the definitions for those findings.

SUSTAINED – Where the investigation determines, by a preponderance of the evidence that the alleged misconduct did occur.

NOT SUSTAINED – Where the investigation is unable to determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, whether the alleged misconduct occurred.

EXONERATED – Where the investigation determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the alleged conduct did occur but did not violate APD policies, procedures, or training.

UNFOUNDED – Where the investigation determines, by clear and convincing evidence, that the alleged misconduct did not occur or did not involve the subject officer.

SUSTAINED VIOLATION NOT BASED ON ORIGINAL COMPLAINT (SUSTAINED/NBOOC) – Where the investigation determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, that misconduct did occur that was not alleged in the original complaint but that was discovered during the misconduct investigation.

ADMINISTRATIVELY CLOSED – Where the policy violations are minor, the allegations are duplicative, or investigation cannot be conducted because of the lack of information in the complaint.

Background

In compliance with the 2014 Court Approved Settlement Agreement (CASA) between the United States Department of Justice and the City of Albuquerque, the City Council adopted the Police Oversight Ordinance (§ 9-4-1-1 through 9-4-1-14). This ordinance created a Civilian Police Oversight Agency (CPOA) consisting of a Police Oversight Board (POB) and an Administrative Office led by an Executive Director. The Administrative Office investigates all civilian complaints regarding police conduct and monitors police internal affairs matters. The POB is tasked with reviewing and amending or approving the findings of Administrative Office investigations and providing policy recommendations for the Albuquerque Police Department (APD).

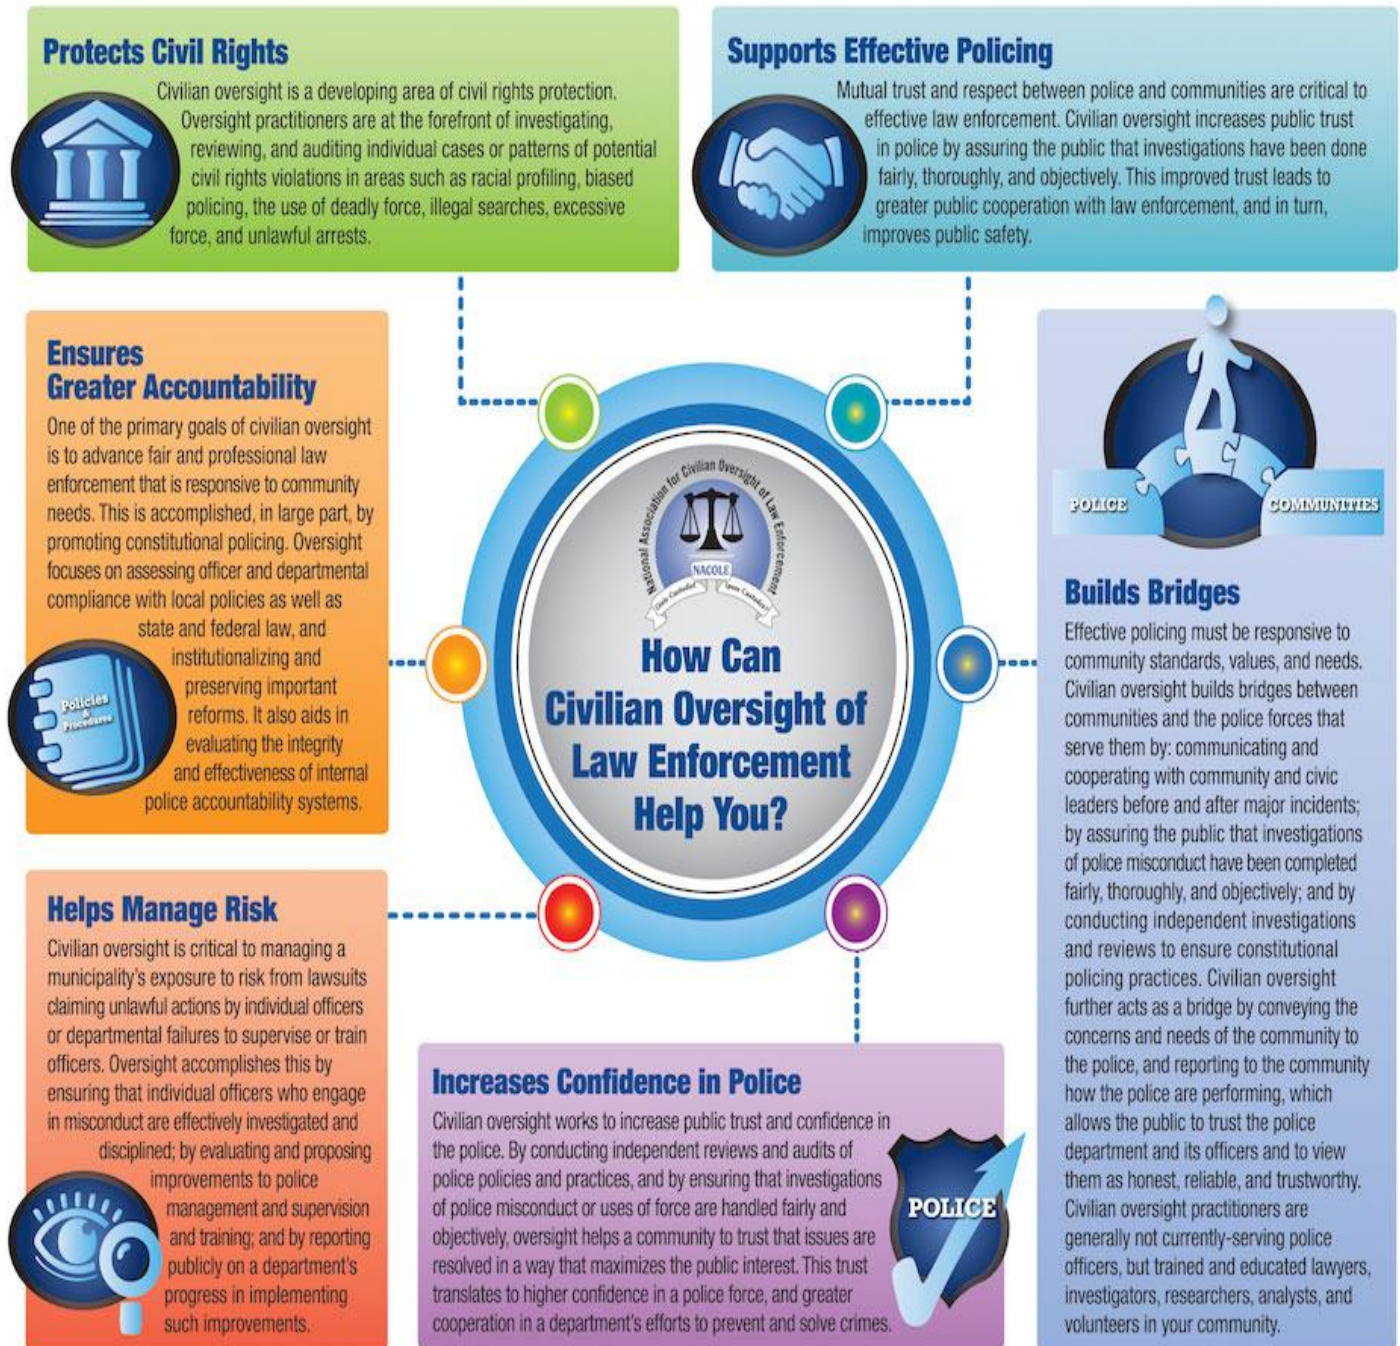

The Police Oversight Ordinance also specifies that the CPOA will publish semi-annual written reports presenting data on the number, kind and status of civilian complaints received; suggested policy and/or procedural changes; statistical race/ethnicity of subject officers and complainants; the CPOA's investigative findings; the Chief of Police's issuance of discipline on those findings; information on outreach initiatives; the quantity of time allocated by the POB to policy activities; and identification of any issues that may necessitate changes to the Police Oversight Ordinance. These semi-annual reports are submitted to the Mayor and City Council. This report addresses the period of January 1, 2017 through December 31, 2017.

In the Independent Monitor's Sixth Report, Dr. James Ginger evaluated the CPOA's compliance levels with relevant requirements of the CASA for the period covering February through July of 2017. The Monitor highlighted areas in which the CPOA was not fully compliant. For example, the Monitor noted that the CPOA occasionally closed cases that did not meet the technical definition for administrative closure or took more than seven business days to assign a case to Administrative Office investigators. The Monitor identified one case in which additional evidence should have been considered before a finding was recommended. The monitor identified two cases that were not completed within the required 90 days. These identified issues were based on a randomly selected sample of eight complaints. However, the Monitor found the CPOA was compliant with most of the pertinent standards set forth in the paragraphs of the CASA. These include requirements concerning: accessibility of complaint/commendations forms; use of a centralized tracking system for complaints; diversity, competence and training of personnel; staffing levels; timely investigation of complaints and serious uses of force; recommendations of disciplinary action and policy changes to the Chief of Police; provision of meaningful opportunities for appeal of CPOA findings; public meetings and implementation of a community outreach program; and submission of semi-annual reports to City Council.

Appointed by the City Council, the POB is comprised of nine volunteer citizen's representative of Albuquerque's demographic diversity and police oversight process stakeholders. Members serve a maximum of two three-year terms and receive initial and ongoing training in a variety of areas, including instruction in civil rights, ride-a-longs with APD officers, firearm simulation, internal affairs, use of force, equity and cultural sensitivity, the Court Approved Settlement Agreement, and the Police Oversight Ordinance. Currently, the Administrative Office has an executive director, four investigators, one community engagement specialist, one data analyst, and one administrative staff. The CPOA will continue to work towards complete compliance with the CASA. Additionally, the CPOA will continue to collaborate with the Internal Affairs Division and the citizens of Albuquerque to fully and fairly investigate allegations of misconduct by the Albuquerque Police Department.

The Purpose of Civilian Oversight

This infographic was developed by the National Association for Civilian Oversight of Law Enforcement (NACOLE) to better explain the purpose of Oversight. NACOLE is a non-profit organization that brings together individuals or agencies working to establish or improve oversight of police officers in the United States.

Mediation

During the intake process the CPOA Director may suggest voluntary mediation to resolve complaints if both the complainant and the employee agree. Mediation is potentially an option for complaints involving apparent miscommunication or misperception between officers and members of the public. Mediation is not considered for complaints involving particularly egregious allegations, such as use of force, possible violations of law, etc. The CPOA has found the experience of both complainants and employees who participate in mediation encouraging.

Community-Police Mediation is an alternative to the traditional way of resolving complaints about police misconduct. Complainants have the opportunity to sit down with the officer in a neutral and confidential setting, with the assistance of a professional mediator. Research has found that mediation is far more likely to lead to satisfaction among complainants and officers than the traditional complaint-handling process. It also is more likely to result in fewer future citizen complaints against a particular officer than traditional methods and is more likely to result in a timely resolution when compared to formal investigations.⁵ It is important to note that several models of best practice for mediation assert that mediation, while an important and useful tool, should not be used in all cases. Most expert officials in mediation of civilian complaints agree that the seriousness of an allegation is one factor in the determination of whether to mediate. For example, in nearly all mediation programs use of force is considered ineligible for mediation. Furthermore, research on eligibility for mediation asserts that cases involving criminal charges, officers with a history of citizen complaints, officers who have been named in three citizen complaints in the past 12 months, or officers with a similar misconduct allegation within the previous 12 months should not be referred to mediation.⁶

Policy Development and Recommendations in 2017

The CPOA Ordinance provides a guideline of what is to be expected from the Agency. During the first year of its existence the POB created a set of operating procedures designed to meet their obligations per the Ordinance. One of these obligations is to spend 51%, of their time on policy review and policy recommendations. This has been interpreted to include creating processes to guide policy development. The resulting policy recommendations should be supported by research and have defined goals. The development process can be used to track both APD SOPs and POB generated policy recommendations through the APD policy development process. Primary responsibility for this policy activity has been assigned to the Policy and Procedures Subcommittee (P&P).

Many of the policy recommendations generated by the P&P were generally thwarted by APD during 2017. When fundamental requests were made to Chief Gordon Eden to allow greater access to the APD policy development process, these requests were firmly rejected in a letter written by the Chief dated on April 17, 2017. The CPOA and POB followed this letter with a letter to independent monitor Dr. James Ginger pointing out that APD's response did not meet their requirements under the CASA. APD was resistant to oversight efforts and generally denied attempts through the OPA and PPRB channels to make policy changes. Little to no record of OPA meetings were made and public input was limited by to a form created by APD. A critical function of the CPOA and POB is to be a conduit of information regarding the APD policy process to the public. This function is improved when CPOA / POB participates directly in the policy development process at APD and reports the results to the public. While this report is for calendar year 2017, it is being written in 2018 after a change in APD hierarchy following the election of a new mayor. The change since this new APD and city administration have taken office is dramatic. CPOA and POB members' recommendations and suggestions are given consideration in the APD policy process and a new era of cooperative relations has begun.

ORDINANCE CHANGES

In response to the problem of overcoming APD reluctance to give access to the policy development process and necessary associated resources and data, the CPOA developed and the POB voted to recommend several changes to the city ordinance establishing the CPOA that would give more weight to CPOA oversight of APD. One change treats the CPOA's ability to comply with certain CASA requirements by giving subpoena power to the POB to facilitate investigations. Other recommended changes deal with POB access to raw data; addition of language requiring APD to take policy input from the CPOA and POB including seats on the policy writing bodies; adding Data Analyst and Community Engagement positions to the ordinance; requiring APD to participate in a hearing on non-concurrences for policy and investigation findings; addition of language requiring the Chief of Police to notify the CPOA and the complainant of final findings and discipline. These ordinance changes are pending approval by the Albuquerque City Council.

ORDINANCE ANALYSIS – SOP CHANGES

During the second half of 2017, POB focus was to develop processes that would create a framework for making policy recommendations. This framework depended on creating a better understanding of the relationship between the CPOA and its oversight role of APD as stated in the ordinance. Although, the ordinance specifies the roles and responsibilities of the CPOA and POB in oversight and APD's obligation to cooperate by giving the CPOA access to APD resources and information, in many cases these obligations have not been written into APD's SOPs. The POB Policy and Procedures Subcommittee started a project to analyze the mention of APD obligations and identify the SOPs which could be modified to acknowledge and accommodate CPOA/POB needs. The ordinance requires that POB members receive training important to their understanding of governmental and legal requirements to serve on a city board. Additionally, APD has imposed additional training to educate POB members about APD operations. Because this training was delayed for new board members, the POB had to make a considerable effort to influence APD to furnish the training they, themselves, had considered important. This activity was not completed until March 2018 when the modified version of the Citizen's Police Academy was compressed into four days of class time held over two consecutive weekends. Much credit needs to be given to the Northeast Area Command Community Policing Council members who had attended an earlier version of the CPA and made several recommendations to improve and shorten it for volunteer board members who are required to take it.

POB POLICY DEVELOPMENT PROCESS

The P&P continued development of their own process (P&P Process) that describes how to generate self-initiated policy recommendations. This process relies on incorporating best practices principles for public policy development. These principles include: identify the issues, propose a solution, identify measurables for policy evaluation, implement the policy, review the policy periodically against the measured data to determine the effectiveness of the policy, and repeat this process on a regular basis. These same principles have been presented and enthusiastically received by APD in working group meetings with APD policy development personnel.

INTEGRATE POB PROCESS TO APD PROCESS

The CASA requires a periodic review of CASA-related SOPs on a six-month basis and all APD SOPs yearly. The CPOA / POB are obligated to participate in these reviews and this activity has dominated the workload of the P&P for the last half of 2017 especially after the change in city administration in December 2017. As a result, the P&P has worked closely with APD to develop a process that integrates with the APD SOP review process.

The P&P participated in creation of SOP 3-52 Policy Development Process through joint meetings with the City Attorney staff, the United States Attorney staff, and APD personnel assigned to policy development. The SOP utilizes the Office of Policy Analysis (OPA) to present new SOPs and SOP changes for review by APD and the public. Public representation is primarily provided by CPOA and POB membership on this committee at periodic OPA meetings. OPA can approve the policy to move to the next step or send it back for further edits and modifications. The modified SOP is available for further public review for about seven days. The Policy and Procedures Review Board (PPRB) meets and review the recommendations made to that point. If PPRB approves, the finalized policy may be further reviewed by the POB for a thirty-day period and then sent to the Chief of APD for approval. If the SOP is a CASA-related policy, the Independent Monitor Team (IMT) reviews it, as well.

In 2018, the P&P initiated a program to have important APD policies presented at a regularly scheduled POB meeting to air the policy in a more publicly accessible venue.

POB POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

A good policy recommendation has several characteristics:

1. It identifies a problem and proposes a solution
2. It is supported by data
3. It is transparent to the community
4. it is acceptable to APD (clear, understandable, trainable)
5. It has a good chance of being adopted

When these conditions are met, the process allows positive working relationships between the civilian oversight, the police, and the general public.

Formal POB policy recommendations may start with an idea for a new policy by a POB member who has an idea stemming from insight into APD operations or by input from the public through community outreach or citizen complaints. After that research must be done to support the proposal and it must be vetted by the P&P. The policy recommendation is submitted to the POB who approves it by a majority vote and then directly forwards the recommendation to the Chief of APD for approval. While this process may be successful, experience from the previous APD administration suggests that it depends primarily on the Chief for acceptance.

We have not forgotten that APD has ownership of its SOPs and has developed a process that relies on significant input from APD subject matter experts who may not be experienced writing SOPs. This process also includes input at OPA where a dozen APD officer-members can represent the views of their division and/or the APOA during reviews of an SOP. A similar situation holds at PPRB. If an external policy recommendation attempts to bypass this process, its chance of successful adoption is significantly reduced.

An alternative to the formal POB process is to influence the existing APD process which allows APD to retain ownership. This method deals with potential objections by APD early in the process rather than waiting for the Chief to cite lack of APD input.

Here are a couple of examples that hopefully will illustrate the point.

Example 1: Code 3 response to priority 1 calls. As a result of a conversation with a former APD officer and an EMT, a proposal was made to suggest that emergency call for service be responded to by obeying the normal speed limits. Research was conducted that says the danger to the public would be reduced and slower response times rarely have a negative effective on the survival of victims. Further information was gathered from the APD officer who teaches driver safety courses at the APD academy. This proposal was not put through the formal process based on the perceived lack of receptiveness of APD to consider POB proposals. The alternative will be to present this information when this SOP (SOP 2-6 Use of Emergency Warning Equipment) comes up for periodic review.

Example 2: Crimes against children investigations. Following the tragic killing of Victoria Martens, and the ensuing APD investigation a citizen complaint was filed that allowed the CPOA to further investigate. The CPOA investigation showed that there were deficiencies in the original APD investigation. These findings resulted in scrutiny of investigative techniques, the CACU and the communication with CYFD. APD has initiated review of these techniques and SOPs which will certainly result in significant changes to several SOPs. The CPOA and POB will provide feedback and a forum for the public to see the results.

Neither of these examples constitutes a formal recommendation but the expected result is that improvements to policies and processes will be made.

2017 Complaint Data

Table 2 shows the number of complaints received, administratively closed, completed investigations, and appealed complaints heard by the CPOA in 2017 in comparison to the previous four years. In 2017, the CPOA received 268 complaints (a 35% increase since 2016) and completed 116 complaints (a 65% decrease since 2016). The 116 complaints represented 215 unique allegations of police misconduct. Of those complaints completed in 2017, 68 were administratively closed and 48 were completed investigations. It is also important to note that investigations opened in a particular year may not be completed until the subsequent year, (i.e. a complaint received in November will not be completed during the calendar year or a deadline extension was requested).

Table 2. Case Summary and Status of All Complaints Received and Complaints Investigated in 2017

Findings, Discipline, Non-Concurrences, Sustained Cases and Administratively Closed Complaints

The section below will describe the disposition of complaints completed in 2017, the type of discipline imposed, and the types of complaints that were investigated.

INVESTIGATED ALLEGATIONS

There were 133 total allegations investigated by the CPOA in 2017, which are presented by type and frequency in Figure 1. Allegations regarding “General Conduct” were the most frequent kind (26 allegations, or 20%), but allegations concerned with “Investigations/Documentation” (14 or 11%), “Officer’s Duties” (11 or 8%), or “Searches/Seizures” (10 or 7%) were also common. The wide variety of complaint types suggests a method for triaging complaints according to severity may be appropriate. Providing the options of mediation and small complaint resolution to civilians with minor allegations might effectively address their grievances while allowing some investigative resources to be used to identify misconduct problems that underlie patterns of more serious complaints.⁷

⁷ Livingston, Debra. 2004. “The Unfulfilled Promise of Citizen Review.” Ohio State Journal of Criminal Law 1: 653-669.

To determine whether allegation types and frequencies varied by gender, Figures 2 and 3 depict the same information presented in Figure 1 separately for females and males, respectively. The array of allegation types represented among males is somewhat more varied (21 types, compared with 17 types for females), but otherwise the two charts are generally similar. In both, allegations regarding “General Conduct,” “Investigations/Documentation,” and “Searches/Seizures” are among the most frequently cited concerns with police conduct.

Table 3 displays findings by allegation cross-tabulation for the ten most common allegations in 2017. Although “General Conduct” represents the category with the highest number of allegations, it also contains the largest number of unfounded findings (18). The largest number of exonerated findings were recommended for the “Investigations and Documentation” category (12), while “General Conduct” and “Acting Officiously” share the highest frequencies for not sustained findings (3). The largest number of sustained recommendations was given for the “Compliance with Laws, Rules, and Regulations” category (3).

Table 3. Findings by Allegation Cross-tabulation for the 10 Most Frequent Allegations

	Unfounded	Sustained	Not Sustained	Exonerated	Sustained NBOOC	Total
General Conduct	18	0	3	5	0	26
Investigations & Documentation	1	0	0	12	1	14
Officer's Duties	2	2	0	7	0	11
Searches & Seizures	0	1	0	9	0	10
Acting Officiously	5	0	3	1	0	9
Compliance with Laws, Rules, & Regulations	2	3	1	0	0	6

General Order	1	1	1	1	0	4
On-Duty Conduct	3	0	0	1	0	4
Total	39	7	8	38	1	93

Figure 4 charts the total number of complaints closed in 2017 with one or more allegations. Of the 116 complaints completed, 41 (35%) contained two or more allegations and 27 (23%) represented three or more allegations. The majority only included a single allegation (75 complaints, or 65%). In total, these complaints accounted for 215 separate allegations of misconduct against APD officers and employees.

INVESTIGATION FINDINGS

The 48 investigated complaints represented 133 allegations of misconduct. Figure 5 describes the percentage of exonerated, sustained, not sustained, and unfounded findings for these allegations. Of the total findings, 53 were unfounded (40%), 11 were not sustained (8%), 50 were exonerated (38%), 16 were sustained (12%), and 3 were sustained/NBOOC (sustained violation not based on original complaint) (2%). According to the Cato Institute the national average for sustained findings in police misconduct is 8%, putting the Albuquerque Police Department above average in its sustained findings (CATO Institute's National Police Misconduct Reporting Project, 2010).⁸

Complaint Disposition Standards: Civilian Police Oversight investigators investigate complainant claims of officer misconduct and make findings regarding alleged misconduct based upon available evidence and requirements of APD's Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs). The Executive Director reviews all investigations and determines a final finding based on a preponderance of the evidence. A preponderance of the evidence means that one side has a greater weight of evidence that is more credible and convincing than the other side. If the credible evidence is 50-50, the proper finding is Not Sustained.

⁸ There may be some problems with using agency sustain rates as a reliable performance indicator. Due to a lack of across agency standards for sustained findings, the diverse type of complaints filed in different agencies, and the fact that findings are just one indicator of agency performance researchers have cautioned strongly against using findings as a lone indicator of oversight function and performance (Walker 2001: 120-122 and 134-135; De Angelis, Joseph et. al. 2016).

To explore whether findings may have differed significantly between male and female complainants, Figures 6 and 7 present allegations by gender for the 113 findings for which gender of complainant was reported. Together the figures indicate broad similarity by gender, with a slightly higher proportion of not sustained and exonerated findings for allegations submitted by female complainants (13% and 40%, respectively compared with 6% and 35% for males) and a slightly higher proportion unfounded findings for allegations submitted by male complainants (51% compared with 38% for females).

TYPES OF SUSTAINED FINDINGS BY THE CPOA

As Figure 8 indicates, the 16 sustained findings varied over 12 different allegation types in 2017. The three most common allegations among those sustained were: Compliance with Laws, Rules and Regulations (3 complaints, or 19%); Towing (2 cases, or 13%); and Officer's Duties (2 cases, or 13%).

DISCIPLINE ON SUSTAINED FINDINGS

Figure 9 presents the disciplinary actions imposed on officers who received a sustained complaint in 2017. Albuquerque Police Department Officers with Sustained findings of standard operating procedures violations were referred to Chief of Police for discipline. The Chief of Police has sole disciplinary authority over APD personnel for findings of misconduct, including findings of misconduct made by the CPOA and the POB. The APD Chief of Police imposed disciplinary action on 14 of the sustained findings in 2017 resulting in 3 suspensions, 5 verbal reprimands and 6 letters of reprimand.

NON-CONCURRENCES IN FINDINGS

The next few charts describe the non-concurrences in findings between APD and the CPOA. Once the CPOA makes findings and discipline recommendations the case is sent to APD in order to review CPOA recommendations and make final findings and discipline. In 2017, there were 4 allegations regarding 3 types of misconduct for which the CPOA and the Chief of Police did not concur on the finding. Two were sustained by the CPOA and given an exoneration by APD (Procedure); one was sustained not based on original complaint by the CPOA and sustained by APD (Use of On-Body Recording Device); and one was considered unfounded by the CPOA and not sustained by APD (Compliance with Laws, Rules, and Regulations). Figure 10 shows these discrepancies put the non-concurrence rate between the CPOA and the APD chain of command at 3%.

Figure 10: Percentage of Non-concurrences on Sustained Findings between the CPOA and the Chief of Police in 2017

Figure 11 presents the total number of findings by type for the CPOA and APD. The CPOA and APD generally agreed on the findings for each of the 133 investigated in allegations in 2017, with the CPOA recommending slightly more sustained, sustained/not based on original complaint, or unfounded findings and slightly fewer not sustained or exonerated findings than APD.

ADMINISTRATIVELY CLOSED ALLEGATIONS

Some complaints received by the CPOA can or should be dealt with outside of the investigatory context. Some conflicts that arise for example can be better navigated with a carefully mediated face to face conversation. Sometimes conflicts brought to the attention of the CPOA can be mitigated by providing information to the complainant about how to contact the officer or how to access their property being held by the police department. Some complaints are duplicative meaning that a complaint about that subject from that civilian has already been received. There are cases where civilians withdraw their complaint on an officer or where their complaint is outside of the jurisdiction of the CPOA. In these cases, it is imperative that the CPOA has the authority to informally resolve a complaint or administratively close it if an administrative investigation would not have an effect on the outcome of the conflict.

Figure 12 presents the allegations administratively closed in 2017 by reason for closure. More than three-quarters (61 of 81 allegations, or 75.3%) were administratively closed because they were withdrawn, lacked sufficient information, did not violate a standard operating procedure, or were located outside the jurisdiction of the CPOA.

Demographics of Complainants

In 2017

For complaints completed in 2017, Figures 13 and 14 present the number of complainants with one or more allegations or complaints, respectively. Documenting individuals with multiple allegations or repeat complaints is the first step in identifying persons who may need further support or resources. The majority of complainants had only one complaint and three-fifths had only one allegation of misconduct per complaint. In total, 109 individuals accounted for 116 complaints representing 215 allegations in 2017.

Figures 15 and 16 depict the gender demographics of complainants in 2017 and the overall Albuquerque population in 2016, while Figures 18 and 19 present the racial/ethnic composition for each of these groups.⁹ A somewhat larger percentage of complainants in 2017 were male (44%) than female (40%), while the gender makeup of the remaining complainants (16%) was not known. It is therefore not possible to determine whether either sex is disproportionately represented among complainants relative to the proportion they comprise of the city population, but research suggests that in customer service settings women, on average, tend to be more vocal about their dissatisfaction with service than men.

Although respondents originally reported race and Hispanic ethnicity information separately, the authors assigned “Hispanic” as a racial category if respondents chose “Hispanic” as their ethnicity (unless they chose “Mixed Race” for their racial group). This decision makes the racial categories presented in Figure 17 mutually exclusive. Most complainants were White and there is some overrepresentation of Black complainants relative to the Albuquerque population. However, about one-third of the race/ethnicity data for complainants are missing or unknown and the categories used by the CPOA and U.S. Census are not identical. Therefore, comparisons between complainant demographics and the larger Albuquerque population demographics are difficult to make.

The Department of Justice mandated changes to collected demographic information concerning mental illness, homelessness, gender, sexual orientation, and proficiency in the English language. These changes were made to the online complaint form on April 1, 2015 and to the paper complaint form on May 1, 2015. It should be noted that many complainants are reluctant to answer these questions, which may call into question the veracity of the data and its usefulness in shaping APD policy.

Figure 19 summarizes complainants who identified a specific sexual orientation on the complaint form. Unfortunately, with 60% of the sample of citizen complainants not identifying their sexual orientation it is challenging to come to conclusions about what this means in terms police interaction with the LGBTQ community.

Figure 20 charts the mental health status of complainants in 2017. Complainants were asked to identify whether they have had a specific experience with mental health issues and Figure 21 summarizes their answers. This is important data to collect, as it can allow us to better understand how police officers might be interacting with individuals with mental health issues. Unfortunately, with 58% of the sample of citizen complainants not reporting or having an unknown mental health status, it is difficult to come to clear conclusions about what this means in terms police interaction with the mental health community.

Figure 21 summarizes the English proficiency status of complainants in 2017. Unfortunately, with approximately half of the sample of citizen complainants not identifying or having unknown English language proficiency, it is a challenge to come to conclusions about what this means in terms police interaction with non-English speaking communities or communities with limited English proficiency.

Figure 22 summarizes complainants who identified as being homeless or not. Unfortunately, with 50% of the sample of citizen complainants not identifying whether they are homeless or having an unknown homelessness status, it is a challenge to come to conclusions about what this means in terms police interaction with homeless individuals in Albuquerque.

Of the 109 individuals for whom complaints were completed in 2017, Figure 23 shows that two-thirds were from Albuquerque. Another 11% resided in other New Mexico cities, including 4% from Rio Rancho, 2% from Santa Fe, and less than 1% each from Alamogordo, Bernalillo, Edgewood, Moriarty, Placitas, and Sandia Park. The remaining 23% did not specify their residency.

Demographics for Officers in 2017

In total, 105 APD sworn and civilian staff were represented in civilian police complaints investigated by the CPOA in 2017. Figure 25 indicates that males made up 85% (N=89) of the officers named in resolved cases whereas females constituted only 15% (N=16) of such cases. For comparison, Figure 26 on the following page presents the overall APD demographic breakdown by gender for all sworn officers in 2016.¹⁰ This comparison is not perfect because Figure 25 includes both sworn and civilian employees; however, only 18 of the 105 officers (or 17%) subjected to civilian complaints in 2017 were not sworn officers.

Comparing Figures 24 and 25 suggests that the gender composition of APD personnel subjected to civilian complaints in 2017 is approximately proportionate to the gender composition of the full sworn staff of APD in the preceding year. Nevertheless, some research suggests that gender is a predictor of some issue's officers face. For example, being male makes an officer more likely to use force, receive a citizen complaint, and be subject to lawsuit pay outs for police departments across the country.¹¹

Figure 26 shows the number of APD personnel with one or more allegations in 2017. In total, 105 officers and employees accounted for 192 allegations across 93 complaints; it was not unusual for multiple officers to be named in a single complaint. Research suggests that on average a small fraction of officers are responsible for a majority of complaints (Brandl et al. 2001).¹² For example in Figure 26, 57% of sworn and civilian staff members were the subject of only one allegation of misconduct, whereas just 11 individuals were responsible for more than half of all allegations directed against APD in 2017. These data points might suggest a need to identify officers with multiple complaints, identify issues they are having, and recommend training they need.

"Who are the complaint-prone officers?: An examination of the relationship between police officers' attributes, arrest activity, assignment, and citizens' complaints about excessive force." Journal of Criminal Justice 29.6 (2001): 521-529.

Figure 27 shows the rank of officers and employees for whom complaints were completed in 2017. The figure shows that Police Officer 1-Cs comprises nearly two-thirds of all APD personnel subject to complaints. The main reason Police officer 1-Cs have the most complaints is because this group of officers is in the field working with and interacting with citizens more than other groups of officers and therefore are more likely to receive both negative and positive feedback from citizens. Only 104 staff members are represented in Figure 28 because one employee did not have a valid rank at the time of the complaint.

Figure 28 presents the percentage of officers and employees subject to complaints in 2017 by their length of service with APD. Comprising nearly one-third of all involved staff, officers and employees with 10-12 years of experience had the highest frequency of complaints. Compared with the overall number of officers in each length of service category in 2016 presented in Figure 29, complaint-involved officers are overrepresented in the 4-6, 10-12, and 13-15 years of service categories, while they are underrepresented in the 1-3 years of service category. This maybe an indication of a need for an additional round of training at about 10 years of service as officers may become less vigilant about following training on compliance with SOP.

For comparison, Figure 31 charts the racial and ethnic composition of all APD sworn officers in 2016. It is difficult to determine whether any racial/ethnic group is disproportionately represented in civilian complaints relative to their composition of all APD staff because Figure 31 only indicates the racial/ethnic composition of sworn staff, and the categories used by the CPOA and APD are not identical. Yet Figure 32 still indicates that the majority of APD employees in 2016, as those subject complaints in 2017, are White (59%).

Figure 32 shows that the CPOA office completed complaints representing 73 officers with an identified APD Area command in 2017. There were 32 APD staff members with no area command identified because the employee was in a unit not associated with one of these six area command posts (see Figure 33). For example, the employee may have been working in the Real Time Crime Center, Records Division, or the Metro Traffic Division. The highest number of officers with alleged misconduct in known areas occurred in the area of the Northeast area command (17 officers, or 16% of all complaint-involved officers). In order to better track area command the CPOA has started to collect area command data on incident as well as officer. This will allow CPOA to have data on where complaint incidents occur in the city.

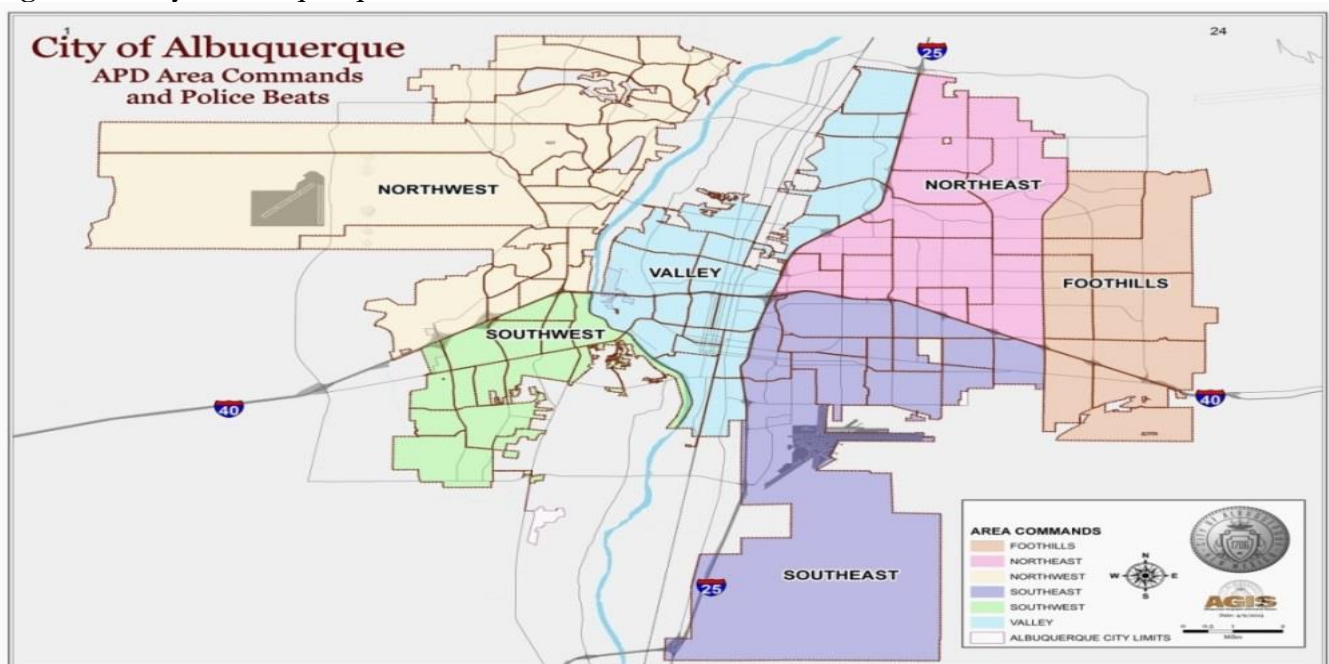

Figure 34 shows that the CPOA office completed complaints representing 66 officers (or 63%) with an identified district in 2017. There were 39 officers (37%) who did not have an identified district. Unknown districts include complaints referring to phone encounters, unspecified incidents, addresses without district, or complaints without location information.

APD Praises and Acknowledgements

Albuquerque residents also contact the CPOA to express gratitude or commend APD employees for acts of service or their response to a particular incident. These commendations were received in the form of phone calls, letters, e-mail messages and numerous face-to-face comments of appreciation. Beginning in January 2013, the CPOA initiated a form via the website for citizens to express praises and acknowledgements to APD officers, employees, and the department as a whole. All forms were submitted to APD Administration to pass along to the employee's supervisors, including the Chief of Police, for acknowledgement, and a letter of commendation was sent to the officer.

Figure 35 indicates March had the highest frequency of commendations at 73, comprising 14% out of a total of 519 commendations received during 2017. Examining the commendations that could be linked to unique citizens and APD staff members revealed that 187 citizens acknowledged 283 APD officers and employees in 2017. However, the originating citizen could not be identified for 148 commendations while the receiving officer could not be identified for 47 commendations, so the numbers of involved citizens and APD staff reported here are likely lesser than were actually involved.

Figure 36 presents the numbers of officers and employees who received multiple commendations during 2017. Of the 283 identifiable staff members who received a commendation, 84 (or 30%) received two or more commendations and 44 (16%) received three or more. Just 15 personnel received at least five commendations and accounted for more than one-fifth of the total number of commendations that could be linked to staff members (98 commendations out of 472). Most officers and employees received one commendation during the year (199 individuals or 70%).

Risk Management Claims Paid for APD in 2017

Understanding when financial payments are made for settlements for issues with APD is important information for police oversight and the citizens of Albuquerque. Understanding how much is paid out and for what types of issues calls attention potential training or policy recommendations. Figure 38 shows the dollar amount paid out by APD department in 2017. A total of $12,080,894 was paid with more than three quarters of this amount being paid by the Metro Traffic Department. However, $8,017,000 of the Metro Traffic Department's money was settled for a single case in which a motor vehicle accident with an APD unit resulted in a wrongful death. If this case is removed from the data, the payout for the Metro Traffic Department falls to $1,105,353, making it slightly less than the quantity paid by the APD Area Commands at $1,563,410.

Figure 38: Risk Management Claim Payments in 2017, by APD Department

Figure 39 presents the dollar amount paid out in 2017 by claim type. The largest quantity was paid out for wrongful death claims, but the majority was for the single case mentioned in the previous paragraph. Other than for wrongful death claims the largest payouts were for injuries or deaths caused by use of force ($1,055,932 or 9% of the total) and damage to citizen or police vehicles ($890,136 or 7%).

D. COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT AND OUTREACH EFFORTS

In 2014, the Civilian Police Oversight Agency Ordinance was amended to include a Community Outreach component to the police oversight efforts. As stated in the Ordinance (O-13-2016), the CPOA shall develop, implement, and from time to time amend as necessary, a program of community outreach aimed at soliciting public input from the broadest segment of the community in terms of geography, culture, ethnicity, and socio-economics. The CPOA shall employ or designate a full-time staff member within the Administrative Office dedicated to community outreach efforts. The CPOA shall report its community outreach efforts to the City Council on an annual basis (Section 9-4-1-4-C-1).

Of the many efforts made to improve the community engagement component, the CPOA's active and consistent involvement with APD's Community Policing Council's (CPCs) initiative was by far one of the most successful outreach efforts made by the Agency. The CPC's were created by Mayor Richard J. Berry in 2014 to serve as a communication bridge between the police department and the community in the aftermath of the incident involving community member, James Boyd. The CPC's are designed to be independent bodies of people organized and ran by community volunteers who live and work in various area commands throughout the City of Albuquerque. During this time, the CPC's were administratively supported by Nicole Chavez-Lucero, the CPC Community Outreach Coordinator for APD.

Director Harness saw the need and opportunity for an independent third-party, like the CPOA, to be involved in the process of Community Policing. As an effort to support and engage the community, the CPOA hosted four Quarterly Summits to provide an opportunity for CPC members to network, collaborate, and learn more about the CASA compliance related issues/topics. As a result, this empowered community members to actively participate and engage in meaningful policy recommendation conversations with organizations like the ACLU/APD Forward and the Police Oversight Board, as well as, leaders like Dr. Steve Rickman from the Independent Monitor's Team and Elizabeth Martinez from the Department of Justice.

By the end of 2017, the Police Oversight Agency saw an overall increase in the number of community partnerships and collaborations due to the efforts of both the CPOA administrative office and the police oversight board members. In total, the CPOA office and the POB members attended approximately 72 CPC meetings, hosted 2 CPC Summits with over 60 community members per Summit, participated in at least 27 community events and/or meetings with stakeholders, accepted multiple invitations for media interviews regarding Agency related materials, lead 4 CPOA training meetings for Emergency Communication Center employees, and lead 2 CPOA introduction trainings at the Police Academy for incoming cadets, as well as, attended the respective APD Police Academy graduations. The CPOA was also an active member of NACOLE and participated in monthly conference calls throughout the year to nurture national networks in police oversight throughout the United States.

The Outreach Mission Statement is: "Outreach will promote the mission of the POB and be the bridge for communication with the community". Throughout 2017, members of the Agency actively sought community input, which lead to monumental collaborations with stakeholders and community leaders, thus truly fostering the mission statement.

III. Creation of the Civilian Police Oversight Agency

On August 18, 2014, City Council passed legislation, which suspended the Police Oversight Commission (POC), Ordinance O-14-15. This legislation became effective on September 5, 2014.

On September 18, 2014, the City Council passed amendments to the Police Oversight Ordinance through Ordinance O-14-13. On October 6, 2014, Mayor Richard J. Berry signed the legislation. The new amendments replaced the prior Police Oversight Commission and the Independent Review Office with the Civilian Police Oversight Agency, one body consisting of the Police Oversight Board, the CPOA Executive Director, and the CPOA Administrative Office.

Under the amended Police Oversight Ordinance, City Council is responsible for selecting and confirming nine members of a Police Oversight Board (POB). The amended Ordinance made several changes to the existing Civilian Police Oversight system. These changes to the Police Oversight process included change from two independent bodies, the former Independent Review Office and Police Oversight Commission, into a one-body system, the Civilian Police Oversight Agency (CPOA). The CPOA consists of a Council-appointed Board which oversees an Executive Director. The Executive Director manages the day-to-day operations of the CPOA's Administrative Office. The CPOA must also:

- Physically be located outside of City Hall
- Manage its own budget - Minimum Budget: ½% of APD Budget (±750k/yr.)
- May Hire its own Contract Legal Counsel
- Fulfill its duty to:
 - Perform Community Outreach
 - Promote Accountability within APD
 - Investigate Citizen Complaints
 - Make APD Policy Recommendations

The Police Oversight Board (POB) consists of nine At-Large, Council-appointed members, who are representative of the City as a whole. The Board Members may be removed for cause by 2/3 vote of either the Council or POB. Members will hold three-year, staggered terms. The amended Ordinance increased training requirements. The Board is tasked with, among other things, developing policy recommendations and reviewing Citizen Police Complaint Investigations.

The CPOA's Executive Director is required to hold a law degree and have experience in investigations. City Council appoints the Executive Director upon recommendation from the POB. The position has a three-year term. The Executive Director leads the Administrative Office and reviews Citizen Police Complaint investigations. He or she reports to the POB. City Council may remove the Executive Director upon recommendation of 2/3 of POB.

The Executive Director also prepares and submits recommended findings in officer involved shooting cases to the POB for their approval. The Executive Director has access to any APD information or documents that are relevant to a civilian's complaint, or to an issue, which is ongoing at the CPOA. The Ordinance also requires the Executive Director to play an active public role in the community, and whenever possible, provide appropriate outreach to the community to publicize the civilian complaint process.

Under the amended Ordinance, the CPOA is staffed with classified City employees who provide staff support to the POB. The CPOA staff performs all administrative functions of the Agency. The CPOA staff is required to receive and investigate all Citizen Police Complaints and to review and monitor APD Internal Affairs. The CPOA creates semi-annual reports, which include general trends and issues at APD.

The Amended Ordinance also changed the process for reviewing Civilian Police Complaints against the Albuquerque Police Department:

1. A person may file a Complaint against the Albuquerque Police Department (APD) via the internet or in writing.
2. The CPOA will mediate Complaints, whenever appropriate and agreed upon by the parties.
3. If the case is not appropriate for mediation, the Civilian Police Oversight Agency (CPOA) will open a case and assign it to an investigator. The assigned investigator will interview witnesses, obtain evidence, and interview the APD officers involved.
4. Once the investigation of the Complaint is completed, the Executive Director of the CPOA will review the Complaint and results of the investigation to determine if there are any violations of Albuquerque Police Department Standard Operating Procedures. Standard Operating Procedures are the Police Department's rules regulating police and employee actions and conduct.
5. The Executive Director of the CPOA will draft a letter indicating his conclusions and findings, which the POB will accept, reject, or modify. The Executive Director may send the completed investigation to the Department in order to meet discipline deadlines.
6. The members of the Police Oversight Board (POB) will review the Complaint and approve the Executive Director's findings and conclusions.
7. After the POB has approved the Executive Director's findings, the CPOA will send the findings to the person who filed the Complaint via Certified Mail and to the Albuquerque Police Department.
8. The person who filed the Complaint may appeal the POB's findings.

The Civilian Police Oversight Agency can only recommend discipline. The Chief of Police retains sole authority to impose discipline to an Albuquerque Police Department employee for violations of the Albuquerque Police Department Standard Operating Procedures. The person who filed the Complaint may appeal the POB's findings and the Chief's disciplinary findings.

A. HOW TO FILE A COMPLAINT/COMMENDATION

Written complaints may be submitted via the following:

- CPOA's website: www.cabq.gov/cpoa
- CPOA office at Room 813, Plaza del Sol, 600 2nd Street NW (8th Floor);
- PO Box 1293, Albuquerque, NM 87103;
- Over the phone, CPOA Main Office, 505-924-3770;
- Any APD substation or facility; or any APD officer on duty;
- Any Supervisor at a City of Albuquerque public library or community center

The Civilian Police Oversight Agency can only recommend discipline. The Chief of Police retains sole authority to impose discipline to an Albuquerque Police Department employee for violations of the Albuquerque Police Department Standard Operating Procedures. The person who filed the Complaint may appeal the POB's findings and the Chief's disciplinary findings.

Any person may file a written complaint against APD officers or employees. Anonymous complaints are also welcomed. The CPOA website contains an electronic complaint form. Written forms are obtainable at the CPOA office, all City of Albuquerque public libraries, community centers, and all of the APD substations or facilities.

After a formal complaint is submitted, the following process takes place:

1. When the Executive Director (Director) receives a written complaint, the complaint is entered into the CPOA's case management database and assigned a Citizen Police Complaint (CPC) number.
2. The Director reviews the complaint for jurisdiction and then assigns the case to a CPOA investigator.
3. The Investigator interviews the complainant, obtains evidence, and conducts a Garrity interview of the target officer.
4. Upon completion of the investigation, the Director reviews the investigation for thoroughness, impartiality, and fairness.
5. The Director makes proposed findings and conclusions based on the evidence developed in the investigation as to whether the alleged misconduct violates the rules governing APD employees' conduct called Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs). All findings are based on a preponderance of the evidence. The preponderance is based on the more convincing evidence and its probable truth or accuracy, not the quantity of evidence (to be able to show one side's contention is more likely true than the other). The Director writes a draft letter to the person who filed the complaint, outlining his findings and conclusions.
6. APD Chain of Command reviews the findings of the Director prior to POB review only to ensure timeliness to impose discipline under the Union Contract. (90 days).

7. POB Board hears the complaint and approves or modifies findings, or remands for further investigation by the CPOA.

8. If the person who filed the complaint is dissatisfied with the findings, they may appeal the decision to the Police Oversight Board. Appeals are to be heard during POB's monthly meetings, which are televised and open to the public.

9. The Chief of Police has sole disciplinary authority over APD personnel for findings of misconduct, including findings of misconduct made by the CPOA.

The Civilian Police Oversight Agency does not conduct criminal investigations.

IV. Department of Justice Settlement Agreement

On April 10, 2014, the Department of Justice (DOJ) issued a Findings Letter regarding the Albuquerque Police Department (APD). The DOJ found that there was reasonable cause to believe that APD engaged in a pattern or practice of use of excessive force, including deadly force, in violation of the Fourth Amendment. The DOJ further determined that structural and systemic deficiencies contributed to the use of unreasonable force.

On November 10, 2014, the City of Albuquerque (City) and the Department of Justice (DOJ) submitted a proposed Settlement Agreement to resolve the matter of United States v. City of Albuquerque.

Key elements of the Settlement Agreement include:

1. Use of Force- policy reforms, reporting, reviewing and investigating
2. Additional Training- for use of force situations, crisis intervention, and Field Officers
3. Staffing and Accountability- including additional accountability measures and a Monitor
4. Recruiting, Selection, and Promotions- adding layers of evaluations into the promotion process
5. Community Engagement and Oversight
6. Implementation/Compliance Timeline

Appendix

V. Definitions of Types of Administratively Closed Complaints

1. Mediation (Supervisor Solution): The complaint against the officer has been satisfactorily resolved in an informal manner with the help of the officer's supervisor.
2. No SOP allegation: The complaint did not allege any unprofessional behavior on the part of the officer(s).
3. Complaint withdrawal: The citizen did not wish to proceed with any further investigations.
4. Preliminary investigation did not find any SOP violation: The CPOA reviewed the officer's actions and the evidence indicated that the officers followed APD Standard Operating Procedures.
5. Complaints of unidentified officer: The CPOA could not determine if the complaint mentioned any officers or identifiers to further investigate the case or could not determine if the officers complained about were employed by the Albuquerque Police Department.
6. Complaints filed without IRO jurisdiction to investigate: The CPOA does not have legal authority to investigate into the complaint.

Following the settlement agreement with the DOJ, the CPOA is now required to accept and investigate anonymous complaints and complaints regardless of the date of the alleged misconduct. Administratively closed complaints may be re-opened if additional information becomes available.
